I. INTRODUCTION

Welcome to third-year History. Congratulations on completing second year, particularly on passing the examinations and completing the course work, and welcome to the last year of our under-graduate History programme.

This course-book is intended to equip you with the information you will need about the third-year History programme. It includes course descriptions, booklists, information on tutorials, essays and examinations. If you have any queries about the courses or any other matter referred to therein, or if you encounter problems that are not addressed here, feel free to contact a member of the Department. The offices of each staff member are presented at the bottom of the page. In addition, the History Department operates a staff-student liaison committee, which has proved a useful forum for discussing matters of general concern. Third-Year representatives will be elected early in first term. The committee meets during the year according to an agreed schedule, or as required.

As you know the College has an active Student History Society. This organises meetings, talks, outings and social functions. The Society is an important aspect of the experience of studying History. Much of the honour/burden of running the society falls to third years. If you have ideas, now is your chance. Please become involved. A general meeting will be held in the second week of term to elect a committee and to organise the programme for the year.

THIRD YEAR B.A.

II. COURSE LISTS AND REQUIREMENTS

Students take four courses as follows:

- two core courses HIST 301 and HIST 302
- one of the optional courses HIST 303 or HIST 304
- one of the documents courses HIST 306–307, HIST 310

In 2011–12, the History Department's courses in third year will be taught as follows:

CORE COURSE: First Semester

HIST 301: Modern Ireland 1850–2000 (Daithí Ó Corráin)

CORE COURSE: Second Semester

HIST 302: Modern Europe, 1870–1950 (Carla King)

OPTIONAL COURSES: First Semester

HIST 303: Herstory: Women in Europe from the Renaissance to the Twentieth Century (Linda Kiernan)

OR

HIST 304: America: from Civil War to Great Power 1840–1972 (James Kelly)

B.A. DOCUMENTS COURSES: Second semester

Students take one of the following documents courses:

HIST 306: Medieval Archaeology (Matthew Stout)

HIST 307: Women in Nineteenth-Century Ireland (Carla King)

HIST 310: Gender, Power and Politics in the Modern World (Linda Kiernan)

LECTURES

5–6 lectures per week + 1 tutorial

All courses except Documents Courses will break during Teaching Practice.

WRITTEN WORK

B.A.: Five essays (in total) on the core courses and optional courses in 1st Seminar. Students also prepare a research paper in their documents course.

Tutorials:

Essays will be assigned in Tutorial, and corrected by your tutor. In the Documents Course the seminar paper will be assigned, supervised and corrected by the course lecturer.

ASSESSMENT

HIST 301–4: Three hour written examination for each course: three questions to be attempted

HIST 306–307, HIST 310: 2 hour 30 minute written examination plus seminar paper.

Twenty per cent of marks will be awarded for essays and course work. The expectation is that students will not miss lectures or tutorials without legitimate reason, which they may be required to provide in writing.

EXAMINATION SCHEDULE

PAPER I	PAPER II	PAPER III	PAPER IV
HIST 301	HIST 302	HIST 303–4	HIST 306–307, HIST 310

HIST 301 and HIST 303–304 will be examined at the end of first Semester, in January 2012.

HIST 302, HIST 306–307, HIST 310 will be examined at the end of the second semester, in May 2012

Coursebook

Every student is entitled to a copy of the course-book, which will be distributed at the beginning of the academic year. The course-book is also available for consultation and downloading on the Department’s website. If you lose or mislay your copy of the course-book, it can be downloaded at your convenience.

III. HISTORY TUTORIALS AND ESSAYS

TUTORIALS:

Early in first term each student will be assigned to a tutorial group that meets weekly during the year. If, for any reason you are not assigned to a tutorial group, it is your responsibility to bring it to the notice of the Director of Tutorials, Dáire Keogh (e-mail – daire.keogh@spd.dcu.ie, Room E213), without delay. It is in every student's interest to treat tutorials with due seriousness. The tutor will arrange topics for discussion (in advance), recommend reading, assign essays and discuss written work when completed.

Attendance at tutorials is mandatory. Absences must be explained to your tutor, preferably in advance, and in the case of three consecutive absences to the director of tutorials in person and in writing. The tutorial grade counts for 20% of end of year marks. All essays count towards the tutorial mark. Marks can be deducted for non-attendance. Students who fail to attend regularly and/or fail to submit assignments in a timely fashion may be deemed incomplete and prevented from proceeding with their degree. STUDENTS MUST OBTAIN 40% IN THEIR TUTORIAL MARK TO PASS HISTORY.

ESSAYS:

HIST 301-4	5 ESSAYS
HIST 306-307, HIST310	SEMINAR PAPER

Essays will be assigned by the tutors from lists prepared and provided by course lecturers. Essays should be submitted by arrangement with your tutor on the dates agreed during the academic year. Because the courses are taught and examined on a semester basis, essays appertaining to course should be completed during the semester in which they are taught. Second semester essays should be presented in sufficient time, (i.e. the last essay should be submitted no later than 1 May), to allow them to be return before the end of the semester.

Tutors may refuse to correct essays submitted after the other essays in the batch have been corrected and returned. They have also been advised to treat plagiarism very seriously.

The seminar paper will be arranged directly with the course lecturer, who will allocate topics and dates for submission with students in consultation with the class.

IV. GUIDELINES FOR WRITING ESSAYS

1. LENGTH

There are no minimum or maximum lengths. It depends on the individual student and the particular topic. Circa 3,000 words (eight to ten pages) is average.

2. LAYOUT

- Each essay should contain a title page with the title of the essay, the student's name, the name of the lecturer, course for which it is submitted and the date.
- Each page should have a left hand margin of at least one inch, use a 12pt font size and 1.5 spacing.
- Students are requested to present their essays in a word-processed format and to keep copies of their work.

3. STYLE/APPROACH:

- Most essays require discussion or argument of an issue. A mere recitation of factual information is insufficient. Information should be used in support of, not as a substitute for, argument.
- It cannot be overstressed that there are no absolutely right or wrong answers, no definitive works, no one unchallengeable or unchallenged interpretation. Thus reliance on a single source is unwise.
- As with any argument, a familiarity with various viewpoints or interpretations enhances the quality of the essay.
- However, students are free (indeed, are encouraged) to formulate their own views and to question the interpretations of others, not least the lecturers.
- To facilitate clear, logical argument, essays should contain an introduction which defines the question posed, assesses what it involves and explains how it is intended to proceed, and a conclusion which returns to the question raised and summarises the arguments made and conclusions reached: 'Tell what you are going to tell them; tell them; and tell them what you have told them.'
- The focus of the essay should be the essay title. If you believe the title is too sweeping, confining or misleading, do not hesitate to say so. In no circumstances should you ignore it.
- Avoid self-created abbreviations, clichés, colloquialisms and sexist language.
- Avoid lengthy quotations from secondary sources

4. QUOTATION/CITATION

Inevitably, considerable use will be made of books and/or articles in the writing of essays. Where these are used simply as the source of factual information, they need only be listed in the bibliography. Where the distinctive views or interpretations of a particular historian are being substantially reproduced, then the source should be acknowledged precisely by means of a footnote. Where a direct quotation is made, it should be placed in quotation marks (single inverted commas) and precisely acknowledged by means of a footnote, it should not be reproduced as the student's own work. Avoid extensive quotations from secondary sources.

The following method of citation is suggested:

Each direct quotation or citation of a particular historian's distinctive interpretation should be identified at the end of the sentence or paragraph by the use of a number (avail of the automatic footnoting facility in common word processing programmes). At the bottom of each page of the essay each number should be listed in turn and followed on the first occasion by the full reference to the source of the relevant quotation. Subsequent citations should employ a short title. For example, in an essay on the English revolution, the following might occur:

Basically the conflict between the Crown and Parliament was caused by their respective views on government.¹ As Christopher Hill puts it, 'two conceptions of civilisation were in conflict. One took French absolutism as its model, the other the Dutch republic'.²

At the bottom of the page (footnotes), the source of the above quotation would be given thus (for first citation):

1. Christopher Hill, The Century of Revolution (London, 1969), p. 16.
and, for second and subsequent citations:
2. Hill, Century of Revolution, p. 32.

WARNING

PLAGIARISM (THE DIRECT AND UNACKNOWLEDGED TRANSCRIPTION OF MATERIAL) IS A SERIOUS TRANSGRESSION. AT THE LEAST, MARKS WILL BE DEDUCTED. NO MARK GIVEN, OR STUDENTS MAY BE INVITED TO RESUBMIT WHERE IT IS APPARENT THAT AN ESSAY OR PROJECT IS PLAGIARISED.

5. BIBLIOGRAPHY:

At the end of the essay there should be a bibliography listing the books and articles consulted in alphabetical order. This should include the author's name and the name of the work concerned. Titles of books or journals should be italicised. Titles of articles should be placed in single inverted commas. For example:

- B. Manning, 'The Levellers' in E.W. Ives (ed.), The English Revolution (London, 1968), pp 35–61.
P. Robinson, The Plantation of Ulster (Dublin, 1984).

6. THE INTERNET

The World Wide Web is an attractive and accessible source of information. It is no substitute for the printed word, however, and should be used in conjunction with printed sources. It is best used to access primary sources. Moreover, it should be used with discretion, as the information provided is not always reliable. WWW addresses should be given in the footnotes and bibliography.

7. DEADLINES:

Dates for submission of essays will be indicated by individual tutors. It is recommended that students aim to have their first essay completed by mid November, the second by mid December, the third by the end of February, the fourth by the end of March and the fifth by the end of April. Late essays may not be accepted unless a prior arrangement is made, and essays will only be accepted after 1 May 2012 in exceptional circumstances.

8. SUBMISSION OF ESSAYS

Essays should normally be handed to the tutor at the tutorial. They may also be handed in to the History Department's Secretary at D327 who will date and stamp them.

V. COURSE DESCRIPTIONS and BOOKLISTS

HIST 301 MODERN IRELAND 1850–2000 DR DAITHÍ Ó CORRÁIN

A. MODULE DESCRIPTION

This broad survey course treats the dominant themes, personalities and developments in Irish History from the end of the Great Famine to the close of the twentieth century. The action and interaction of motifs such as separatism, land tenure, nationalism and unionism are examined as well as the often complex interplay between cultural, economic, denominational and social forces. Beginning with the aftermath of the Great Famine, this course charts the ending of the Union between Britain and Ireland and scrutinises the historical trajectories of Northern Ireland and the Irish Free State/Republic of Ireland. Recent trends in Irish historiography are also assessed, with particular emphasis on the ‘historical reputations’ of key personalities.

B. LEARNING OUTCOMES

Upon successful completion of this module, students will be enabled to:

- LO 1 – Demonstrate their knowledge of the key themes, tendencies and historical actors in the 1850 to 2000 period
- LO 2 – Identify and assess contested historical and political perspectives
- LO 3 – Comprehend the changing nature of historical evidence and interpretation
- LO 4 – Construct an objective and well-supported written argument based on historical evidence
- LO 5 – Evaluate critically prescribed readings, texts and primary source material
- LO 6 – Develop excellent communication skills through presentation of reasoned verbal argument and acquisition of listening skills during seminar discussion
- LO 7 – Engage in self-directed learning through independent study in specialised areas of personal interest
- LO 8 – Deepen critical and independent thinking, analysis, perception and judgement
- LO 9 – Extend their range of transferable skills including, among others, numeracy, time management, written and verbal communication, and self-evaluation

Electronic Resources

There are a number of websites that will be useful for preparing essays.

- The Dictionary of Irish Biography is an indispensable source and it is available through the Library website at <http://leabharlann.spd.dcu.ie/EnglishSite/OnlineResources/databasesD.html>
- A bibliographical database of Irish history is available on the Bibliography of British and Irish History <http://www.irishhistoryonline.ie/> This will save you considerable time when sourcing additional articles and monographs for essay writing.
- The text of the Official Report of the Parliamentary Debates of the Houses of the Oireachtas is available at [<http://historical-debates.oireachtas.ie/index.html>]. It includes the Dáil Debates from 21 January 1919 (First Dáil) and the Seanad Debates from 11 December 1922
- Irish Newspaper Archives [<http://www.irishnewsarchive.com>] is a searchable online database of Irish newspapers. The site currently has sixteen titles, including The Irish Independent and The Freeman's Journal.
- The Irish Times now has a searchable digital archive from 1859 onwards at [<http://www.irishtimes.com/search/archive.html>].
- CAIN (Conflict Archive on the Internet) has source material and commentaries on the Northern Ireland Troubles at [<http://cain.ulst.ac.uk>].

HIST 302 *EUROPE 1870–1950: SOCIETY AND POLITICS
IN CRISIS AND CHANGE
DR CARLA KING

I. Module description:

This module aims to provide students with an understanding of the main patterns of European history in the late nineteenth and first half of the twentieth century and the interactions between economic, social, political and cultural factors that shaped that history. Having explored the impact of social and economic forces in the late nineteenth century, and the political, diplomatic and imperial rivalries that precipitated the First World War, the focus shifts to the so-called ‘inter-war era’. This was a period in which the gradual democratisation of society was interrupted by the rise of dictatorships across the Continent, culminating in the devastating Second World War. Meanwhile, Russia experienced a succession of revolutions. Major new political philosophies emerged, both of the left and right, for which Europe was to provide a battleground. The course will aim to examine the main features of this formative phase in European history. It is supported on Moodle.

Learning outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this module, students will be enabled to:

LO 1 – Utilise their knowledge and understanding of the history of modern Europe and to display appropriate undergraduate research, analytical and writing skills.

LO 2 – Understand the important ideas that shaped the history of the period, such as nationalism, democracy, socialism, communism and fascism.

LO 3 – Appreciate the interaction between economy, society and politics, in relation to issues such as the impact of the world war on the civilian societies.

LO 4 – Demonstrate a breadth of transferable knowledge and understanding of history and a mastery of research, analytical and writing skills.

LO 5 – Understand some of the main historical debates about the period.

READING LIST

Where books are available in E-book format this is indicated. There is a tutorial on using E-books on the Cregan Library website. For DCU E-Books go to Combined Catalogue menu on Cregan Library website and type in author or title.

RECOMMENDED GENERAL TEXTBOOKS: [940.28]

There is no single book that will provide adequate coverage of this course. However, if students wish to have one core textbook as an introduction to the topics, I recommend J.M. Roberts, Europe 1880-1945 (15 copies, 2 on short loan). Lecture notes will refer to relevant pages in this. Other good general textbooks include:

David Thomson, Europe Since Napoleon (Penguin, many editions), 6 copies, 2 on short loan.

Robert Gildea, Barricades and Borders: Europe 1800-1914 (Short Oxford History of the Modern World, 1987), 13 copies, one on short loan.

M.S. Anderson, The Ascendancy of Europe, 1815-1914 (2nd ed., Longman, 1986, 1999), reserve, are highly recommended for the part of the course, while

Eric Hobsbawm, Age of Extremes. The Short Twentieth Century, 1914-1992 (Abacus, 1994, 1995) 3 copies, 909.82

Julian Jackson, Europe, 1900-1945 (2002) 940.5/JAC, 3 copies

Harold James, Europe Reborn: a History, 1914-2000 (2003) 940.5/JAM, 1 copy

Martin Pugh (ed.), A Companion to Modern European History (Blackwell, 1997) and Eric Hobsbawm Age of Extremes. The Short Twentieth Century, 1914-1992, (Abacus, 1994, 1995), 3 copies, 909.82, deal with the twentieth-century section of the course.

NB: You should buy at least one of the above.

Also see Stefan Berger, A Companion to Nineteenth-Century Europe, 1789-1914 (2006), SPD E-book, and Gordon Martel (ed.), A Companion to Europe, 1900-1945 (2006), SPD E-book.

GOOD GENERAL WORKS INCLUDE:

Anthony Best, An International History of the Twentieth Century (2nd ed., 2008) available as e-book (see library catalogue). Relevant chapters are: 1,2,4,7 & 8.

Felix Gilbert, The End of the European Era: 1890 to the Present (1991), 940.5.

Martin Gilbert, A History of the Twentieth Century, Vol. I: 1900-1933, 909.82.

Eric Hobsbawm, The Age of Empire, 1875-1914 (1987), 909.8, 2 copies.

James Joll, Europe Since 1870 (1973, 1980), 5 copies, short loan, 940.2, 10 copies.

Paul Kennedy, The Rise and Fall of the Great Powers (1988), 6 copies.

W.R. Keylor, The Twentieth-Century World (1984), 8 copies.

M. Kolinsky, Continuity and Change in European Society: France, Germany and Italy Since 1870 (1972).

Stephen J. Lee, Europe, 1890-1945 (2003).

George Lichtheim, Europe in the Twentieth Century (1972) 940.2.
 Mark Mazower, Dark Continent. Europe's Twentieth Century (1999), 2 copies.
 Agatha Ramm, Europe in the Nineteenth Century (1984).
 Graham Ross, The Great Powers and the Decline of the European States System (1983), 2 copies, 1 on short loan.
 Norman Stone, Europe Transformed, 1878-1919 (1983, 1985), 3 copies.
 Richard Vinen, A History in Fragments. Europe in the Twentieth Century (2002).

Section 1: Social change

Modernisation, industrialisation, urbanisation, peasant society [305.56]

HIST 303 HERSTORY: A HISTORY OF WOMEN FROM THE RENAISSANCE TO THE TWENTIETH CENTURY

DR LINDA KIERNAN

[Optional Course]

This course will provide an introduction to the place of women in the history of Europe, across countries, classes and cultures. Social, cultural, political, religious and intellectual roles will be explored, from mothers to monarchs, witches to widows, nuns to nurses, wet-nurses to washerwomen, and maids to mistresses, to name but a few. Students will gain a understanding of how gender roles differed, and of how the story of women's history, or 'herstory', has unfolded over time.

Week One: Introduction to Women's Historiography. Gender and History.

Week Two: Muses and Matrons: Women and the Renaissance.

Week Three: Nuns and novices: Religious Women and the Reformation.

Week Four: Mothers and Mistresses: maternity and matrimony in Early Modern Europe.

Week Five: Monarchs and matriarchs: Gender, power and politics in Early Modern Europe.

Week Six: Witches, wet-nurses and widows: Women on the Fringes.

Week Seven: Salonnières and philosophes: female voices in the Enlightenment.

Week Eight: Demoncracy for all? Women and Revolution.

Week Nine: Women in the Nineteenth Century.

Week Ten: Suffragettes and suffragists: the fight for the female franchise.

Week Eleven: Conclusion: Legacies for the Twentieth Century and beyond.

Reading List

There are many fine texts dealing with the history of women available. If you decide to purchase one I would recommend one of the following:

Bonnie S Anderson, A History of their Own, 2 vols, (London, 1988). Students will find the second volume especially useful, 305.4094/AND.

Renate Bridenthal, Susan Mosher Stuard and Merry E Wiesner eds, Becoming Visible. Women in European History. 3rd Edition. (Boston, 1988). An excellent volume on many diverse topics, ranging from work to war.

Olwen Hufton, The Prospect before Her (New York, 1996) 305.40940903/HUF.

Other general reading:

Lynn Abrams, The making of modern woman: Europe 1789-1918, (London, 2002) 305.4094/ABR.

Journals: Programmes such as JSTOR and Project Muse are both accessible through the library webpage at http://services.spd.dcu.ie/library/LIBeng/Online_Resources.html

These services allow you to search scholarly articles in many academic journals at once. Articles are more specialised, and you will find them of greater benefit when you have completed preliminary reading.

Selected Reading, week-by-week.

Week One: Introduction to Women's Historiography. Gender and History.

What does a history of women actually mean? Where had the idea of women's history come from and how has it developed? How can we use gender as a useful form of historical analysis?

Peter Barry, Beginning Theory, (Manchester, 2002) 801.95/BAR provides a good introduction to feminism, gender, and more (for the more adventurous student!)

Joan Wallach Scott, Gender and the politics of history, (New York, 1999).

Joan Wallach Scott, 'Gender: a Useful Category of Historical Analysis', American Historical Review, Vol. 94, no. 5 (1986), pp. 1053-1075.

Week Two: Muses and Matrons: Women and the Renaissance.

Carole Levin, 'Women in the Renaissance', in Bridenthal et al, Becoming Visible, pp. 153-174.

Merry E Wiesner, Women and Gender in Early Modern Europe (Cambridge, 1993).

Natalie Zemon Davis and Arlette Farge (eds.), A History of Women: Renaissance and Enlightenment Paradoxes (Vol. 3 of A History of Women in the West, Duby and Perrot) (Cambridge, 1993).

Week Three: Nuns and novices: Religious Women and the Reformation.

Susan C. Karant-Nunn, 'The Reformation of Women', in Bridenthal et al, Becoming Visible, , pp. 175-202.

Olwen Hufton, The Prospect before Her, chapter 10 'Obedient to Thy Will', pp. 363-423.

Anderson, A History of their Own, vol. 1, chapter III 'Women of the Churches', pp. 181-268.

Mary T. Malone, Women and Christianity., From the Reformation to the 21st century Vol.3. (Dublin, 2003) 270.082/MAL.

Week Four: Mothers and Mistresses: maternity and matrimony in Early Modern Europe.

Olwen Hufton, The Prospect before Her, chapters 3,4, and 5, pp. 102-220.

Bonnie Anderson, A History of their Own, vol. 1, pp. 272-331, 431-444.

Joanne Bailey, Unquiet lives: marriage and marriage breakdown in England, 1660-1800. (Cambridge, 2003) 306.810942/BAI.

Elizabeth A. Foyster, Manhood in early modern England: honour, sex and marriage. (Harlow, 1999) 305.310942/FOY.

Jack Goody, The development of the family and marriage in Europe (Cambridge, 1983) 306.8094/GOO.

Beatrice Gottlieb, The family in the Western world from the Black Death to the industrial age, (New York, 1993) 306.8509/GOT.

Linda Kiernan, 'The Mistress and Matrimony: attitudes to marriage at the court of Louis XIV', in Christine Meek and Catherine Lawless (eds), Studies on Medieval and Early Modern Women 4. Victims of Viragos? (Dublin, 2005) (available from lecturer).

Diarmaid MacCulloch, Reformation. Europe's House Divided, 1490-1700, (London, 2004), chapters 15 and 16.

Lawrence Stone, The family, sex and marriage in England 1500-1800. (Harmondsworth, 1979) 306.85/STO.

Week Five: Monarchs and matriarchs: Gender, power and politics in Early Modern Europe.

There are many biographies on individual queens, regents and consorts from which to choose, as well as those titles dealing with the political role of women in general. Major figures such as Elizabeth I, Catherine de Medici, Marie de Medici, Christina of Sweden, Anne of Austria, and Catherine the Great present cases of legitimate female power in the Early Modern period, however the informal influence of women will also be explored, for example through the role of the royal mistress.

Clarissa Campbell Orr, Queenship in Europe, 1660-1815. The Role of the Consort (Cambridge, 2005).

Week Six: Witches, wet-nurses and widows: Women on the Fringes.

Witchcraft presents the historian with a huge range of sources, both primary and secondary, and the library holds a particularly strong collection on this subject:

Olwen Hufton, The Prospect before Her, chapter 9 'Women and the Devil', pp. 336-362.

Ankarloo Bengt, and Gustav Henningsen, (eds.). Early modern European witchcraft: centres and peripheries (Oxford, 1993), CP 133.43094/ANK.□

Robin Briggs, Communities of belief: cultural and social tension in early modern France (Oxford and New York, 1989), CP 944.03/BRI.□

G.R. Quaipe, Godly zeal and furious rage: the witch in early modern Europe (London, 1987), CP 133.43094/QUA.□

Lyndal Roper, Oedipus and the devil: witchcraft, sexuality and religion in early modern Europe (London, 1994).□

Frederick Valletta, Witchcraft, magic and superstition in England, 1640-70 (Aldershot, 2000), CP 133.430942/VAL.

Week Seven: Salonnières and philosophes: female voices in the Enlightenment.

The Age of Enlightenment, of philosophes and salons, of public opinion and (not so) private scandal, presented a world 'disenchanted', relieved of its stifling superstition. Did women benefit from the enlightened ideas of its (mostly male) philosophes, or were they left in an even more restricted position?

Dena Goodman, 'Women and the Enlightenment', in Bridenthal et al, Becoming Visible, pp. 233-264.

Olwen Hufton, The Prospect before Her, chapter 11 'Corresponding Gentlewomen, Shameless Scribblers, Drudges of the Pen and the Emergence of the Critic', pp. 424-462.

Sara E. Melzer, Rebel daughters: women and the French Revolution, (New York, 1992) 944.04082/MEL.

Week Nine: Women in the Nineteenth Century.

Karen Offen, 'Contextualizing the Theory and Practice of Feminism in Nineteenth-Century Europe', in Bridenthal et al, Becoming Visible, pp. 327-355.

Laura L. Frader, 'Doing Capitalism's Work: Women in the Western Industrial Economy', in Bridenthal et al, Becoming Visible, pp. 295-325.

Charles Sowerwine, 'Socialism, Feminism, and the Socialist Women's Movement from the French Revolution to World War II', in Bridenthal et al, Becoming Visible, pp. 357-388.

Week Ten: Suffragettes and suffragists: the fight for the female franchise.

Sandi E. Cooper, 'Women in War and Peace, 1914-1945', in Bridenthal et al, Becoming Visible, pp. 439-462.

Tim Harris, Popular culture in England, c. 1500-1850, (New York, 1995) 942.06/HAR.

Week Eleven: Conclusion: Legacies for the Twentieth Century and beyond.

The final week will look at the feminist movement of the twentieth century and how it was shaped by the events, writings and ideologies of the preceding centuries. We will explore the continuities and achievements of feminist thinking, with reference to major figures such as Simone de Beauvoir, Germaine Greer, and Kate Millet among others.

HIST 304 *AMERICA: FROM CIVIL WAR TO GREAT POWER c.1840–1972
PROF. JAMES KELLY

[Optional Course]

Module description:

This course provides students with an opportunity both to contextualise and to examine closely how, having experienced the crisis of Civil War, 1860-65, the United States overcame this challenge to its very survival, to embark in the later nineteenth century on a phase of physical, economic and demographic growth that had transformed it into the world's largest economy by the beginning of the twentieth century. By combining a focus on key domestic developments, and its gradual embrace of an active foreign policy, the course traces the assumption by the United States of the leadership of the democratic world and of great power status in the second half of the twentieth century. Grounded on the exploration of the key historical concept of change over time, this course traces the evolution of a modern nation, and examines the themes and issues crucial to an understanding both of the history and present day role in the world of the United States; these include manifest destiny; states rights; slavery; civil war; comparative economic development; reconstruction; race relations; expansion; violence; immigration; protest; progressivism; the emergence of a modern consumerist society; the principles and practice of modern foreign policy; economic growth and economic crisis; the emergence of a superpower; the Cold War and Civil rights. The course is located in a broad national and international historiography.

Learning outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this module, students will be enabled to:

- LO 1 – Display their understanding of the main features – political, economic and social – and the main trends and personalities of nineteenth and twentieth-century American History.
- LO 2 – Discriminate between minor and major causative factors and consequences in analysing and assessing historical episodes
- LO 3 – Dilate on the nature of historical argument and possess an awareness of its mutability
- LO 4 – Engage critically with historical documentation and historical texts and, through their use, construct multi-layered historical interpretations.
- LO 5 – Assess critically and confidently to evaluate the merits of different interpretations and perspectives
- LO 6 – Articulate informed historical opinions that are logical and cogently constructed.
- LO 7 – Pursue independent, self-directed enquiry at an advanced level

Reading List

I: INTRODUCTION

There are a number of very useful general histories of America. The fullest is Morison, Commager and Leuchtenburg, The growth of the American republic (2 vols, 6th edition).

More recent, readable and recommended are

- * H. Brogan, Longman History of U.S.A.
- * M.A. Jones, The limits of Liberty (copy on 24 hour loan)
- * B. Bailyn etc, The Great Republic (2 vols) [copy on 24 hour loan]
- * Esmond Wright, A History of the USA (vols 2 and 3)

Other general histories of value include:

- J. Edward Davies, The United States in World history (973)
 - Bedford and Colbourn, The Americans: a brief History
 - Carroll and Noble, The free and the unfree
 - H. Zinn, A people's history of the United States
 - Dollar, Gundersen etc, America: changing times - a brief history
 - A.S. and W.A. Link, The twentieth century: an American history
 - G.B. Tindall and D.S. Shi, America: a narrative history (3rd ed.)
 - J.M. Blum et als, The national experience..., chapter 10 onwards
 - J.M. Murrin, et als, Liberty, equality, power:..., chapter 13 onwards
- The simplest is Nash, Jeffrey etc, The American People

More detailed overviews can be secured in V.P. de Santis, The shaping of modern America, R.H.Wiebe, The search for order 1877-1920, Sean Dennis Cashman, America in the gilded age, G.A. Donaldson, Abundance and Anxiety: America 1945-60 and W.H. Chafe, The unfinished journey: America since World War II; Sean Dennis Cashman, America ascendant, 1901-45 (973.91)

II: THE ORIGINS OF THE CIVIL WAR

1. The economics of slavery. The starting point for the modern debate on slavery is R.W. Fogel and S. Engerman, Time on the cross. This has been subject to a devastating critique by David, Gutman, Sutch, Temin and Wright, Reckoning with slavery [both at 326.0973; copies on 24 hour loan]. Fogel has responded confidently with Without consent or contract. Also useful are Weinstein, Gatell and Sarasohn, American negro slavery, while Kenneth Stampp provides a humanist critique in The imperilled union; see also Ira Berlin, Generations of captivity: a history of African-American slaves (2003), chapter . Valuable insights can also be gained from Kenneth Stampp in The peculiar institution; L.B. Goodheart, etc, Slavery in American society, J.W. Harris, ed., Society and culture in the slave south (esp. chs 1-3), and E.D. Genovese, The world the slaveholder made, M.M. Smith, Debating slavery: economy and society in the antebellum South.

2. Abolitionism: For an outline see L. Filler, The crusade against slavery, 1830-60 (early chapters) [copy on 24 hour loan]. Claudine Ferrell, The Abolitionist movement, especially chaps 4 and 5 (973.7114) and Thomas Mitchell, Anti-slavery politics and Civil War America (973.7114); A. Zilversmit, The first emancipation: abolition of slavery in the north examines the early phase; S. Harrold, The abolitionists and the South (973.7) and C.J. Hess, Liberty, virtue and progress (973.7) look at southern and northern opinion respectively. J.R. Jeffery, The great silent army of abolitionism (326.80973) examines the immense role of women. See also, D. Donald, 'Towards a reconsideration of abolitionists', in D. Donald, Lincoln reconsidered and Perry and Fellman, Anti-slavery reconsidered, J.B. Stewart, Garrison and the challenge of emancipation, R.H. Abzug, Passionate liberator: Theodore Dwight Weld. A.M. Kraut, ed., Crusaders and Compromisers, chs 1-5; Hugh Hawkins, The Abolitionists: Means, ends and motivations, part 5; W.L. Miller, Arguing about slavery: The great battle in the United States Congress (973.5)

VII: INDUSTRIALISATION AND THE LABOUR RESPONSE (330.941)

An introduction to industrialisation will be found in O'Sullivan and Keuchel, American Economic history (330.973) part six and S. Lebergott, The Americans: an economic record, part 3. Also useful are T.C. Cochran and W. Miller, eds., A social history of Industrial America and T.C. Cochran, Business in American life: a history part III; D.O. Whitten and B.E. Whitten, The birth of big business in the United States 1860–1914 (338.0973); T.J. Misa, A nation of steel: the making of modern America 1865-1925 (338.47669142); P.K. O'Brien, The economic effects of the American Civil war; J.O. Robertson, America's business chapter 3.

For a comparative perspective see P.S. Bagwell and G.E. Mingay, Britain and America: a study of economic change 1850-1939; M. Teich and R. Porter, eds. The industrial revolution in national context. For a technological perspective see T.J. Mosa, A nation of steel: the making of modern America 1865-1925 (338.47669142).

The response to industrialisation is considered in S.P. Hayes, The response to Industrialisation, 1885-1914. For the overall response of labour see M. Dubovsky, Industrialisation and the American worker, and H. Pelling, American labour.

More recent and authoritative are Dulles and Dubovsky, History of American labour

VIII: AGRARIAN RADICALISM

R.A. Billington, Westward expansion: a history of the American frontier, chap 33 provides a brief introduction, as does V.P. de Santis, The shaping of modern America 1877-1920. More detailed are F.A. Shannon, The farmers last frontier, chapters 13-14. and S.P. Hayes, The reponse to industrialisation. See also, H.U. Faulkner, Politics, reform and expansion 1890-1900.

Populism is well served by L. Goodwyn, The populist movement [24 hour loan], W.F. Holmes, American populism (select chapters) [330.973] and J.D. Hicks, The populist revolt [24 hour loan]. See also W.A. Peffer, Populism: its rise and fall.

XI: THE 1920s AND THE NEW DEAL (973.913, .915 and .917)

Tom Kemp, The climax of capitalism, chapters 2-3 presents a succinct introduction. D.M. Kennedy, Freedom from fear [on 24 hour loan] provides an extended account; J.D. Hicks, Republican Ascendancy provides a good outline of the 1920s, while W.E. Leuchtenburg, Franklin Delano Roosevelt and the New Deal is the companion volume for the 1930s. D. Perkins, The new age of Franklin Roosevelt is another useful work. D.R. McCoy, Coming of Age: the United States during the 1920s and 1930s, E.W. Hawley, The great war and the search for a modern order...1917-33, W.E. Leuchtenburg, The perils of prosperity, 1914-32 and D.A. Shannon, Between the wars: America 1919-1941 are alternative single volume surveys. See also R.H. Farrell, The presidency of Calvin Coolidge, D.J. Goldberg, Discontented America: the US in the 1920s

An economic perspective on the 1920s and 1930s is provided in George Soule, The Prosperity decade 1919-29 and B. Mitchell, The depression decade 1929-41.

For the Depression and New Deal see M.A. Bernstein, The Great Depression (338.542); A.L. Hanby, ed., The New Deal: analysis and interpretation. P.K. Conkin, The New Deal; A.J. Badger, The New Deal: the depression years 1933-40. And for the contrasting interpretations of the New Deal, B.H. Sternsher, ed., The New Deal: Laissez faire to socialism; T.H. Watkins, The Great Depression [24 hour loan]; DM Kennedy, Freedom from fear: the American people in depression and war 1929-45; Jeffrey W. Coker, Franklin D. Roosevelt (973.917) and other biographies listed in Section XIII.

XII: AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY 1930-60 (327.73, 973)

A good overall survey of American foreign policy is provided in Mertel, ed., (above); L.C. Gardner, A covenant with power: America and world order from Wilson to Reagan, Walter La Feber, The American Age, chapters 12 to 19 and R.D. Schulzinger, American diplomacy in the twentieth century. See also P.A. Varg, America from client state to world power, chapters 7 and 8, T.G. Paterson et al., American foreign relations since 1895 vol. 2 and G. Martel ed., American foreign relations reconsidered 1890-1993; T.G. Fraser and D. Murray, America and the World since 1945.

American foreign policy in the 1930s and 1940s can be followed in detail in R.A. Divine, The illusion of neutrality which addresses the 1930s, and the same author's Roosevelt and World War II which deals with the early 1940s, see also J.W. Coker, Franklin D. Roosevelt (973.917); R.S. McElvaine, Franklin Delano Roosevelt (973.917); Patrick Renshaw, Franklin D. Roosevelt (973.917); J.E. Wiltz, From isolation to war, 1931-41 pursues the same themes.

XIII: THE COLD WAR 1945–91

There are a wealth of books from which to study American foreign policy in the post war period when America exercised unprecedented international influence:

S.E. Ambrose, Rise to Globalism, 1938-76 (3rd edition) takes a liberal perspective.

H. Agar, The price of power

P.G. Boyle, American-Soviet relations, chapt 5 onwards.

More detailed analysis of the origins of the Cold war can be found in J.L. Gladdis, The U.S. and the origins of the Cold war, 1941-7; of Truman in M.J. Hogan, A cross of iron: HS Truman and the origins of the national security state 1945-54 and H.F. Gosnell, Truman's crises, part 2 and 3, and A.L. Hamby, Beyond the New deal: Harry S. Truman; E.R. May, American Cold War strategy: interpreting NSC 68; Scott Lucas, Freedom's War: the US crusade against the Soviet Union 1945-56; CAS Sibley, The Cold War. For McCarthyism, see R.M. Fried, The McCarthy Era in Perspective; R.G. Powers, Not without honour: the history of American anti-communism, chap 9 (335.40973) and D. Cauter, The Great Fear. For Eisenhower, see S.E. Ambrose, Eisenhower: the president, D. Dockrill, Eisenhower's New Deal National Security Policy 1953-61, C.J. Pack and E. Richardson, The Presidency of D.W. Eisenhower and R.A. Divine, Eisenhower and the Cold War. For Kennedy, B.J. Firestone, The quest for nuclear Stability: Kennedy and the Soviet Union, J.N. Giglio, The president of J.F. Kennedy, and for Johnson, R.A. Divine, The Johnson years (2 vols).

XIV: THE VIETNAM WAR: THE CONFLICT AND ITS DOMESTIC IMPACT (959.7043373, 973.923)

This should be assessed in the context of American foreign policy since 1945, for which see works by Ambrose, Agar, LaFeber, and Gardner cited in section XII. Note also Kim McQuaid, The Anxious Years: America in the Vietnam-Watergate era, part 2 and, in the context of the changing America of the 1960s, see D. Forber (ed.), The Sixties; M. DOCUMENTS COURSES: HIST 306–309, HIST 310 Second Semester

In second semester, Third Year students take one documents course from the list provided. The aim of the documents course is to introduce students to the use of evidence. Following a general introduction, the workshop method will be used. Students will be circulated in advance with relevant documents the context of which they are expected to investigate. The documents will then be discussed in class. In the second part of the course students will present seminar papers based to some extent on primary sources.

Coursework and assessment:

Each student will write an undergraduate research paper based at least partially on primary sources. These papers will be discussed in class. This seminar paper will count for one third of the marks for the course; the remaining two thirds will be assigned for written examination (two questions in 2.5 hours).

Limits on class size:

In November, students will be asked to indicate their Documents course preferences. Because of the nature of the courses, the numbers taking each course will be strictly limited. It is likely that some students may not get their first preference, but a reasonable effort will be made to accommodate student choice.

HIST 306: MEDIEVAL ARCHAEOLOGY

DR MATTHEW STOUT

Module Description

Archaeology is an essential source for the study of Medieval Irish history (c.500-c.1500AD). The results from excavations provide rich evidence for past societies in a period when traditional historical sources are incomplete. In particular, the lives of everyday people can be reconstructed from their material remains. Landscape archaeology, which examines the distribution of ancient sites, elucidates often obscure contemporary references to settlement. The history of the Early Medieval church, for example, is enhanced by examining the monastic ruins that dot the Irish landscape.

The aim of this course is to introduce students to basic archaeological techniques and the key discoveries that have contributed to our knowledge of the past: Deer Park Farms ringfort; the Derrynaflan hoard; Viking Dublin, Bective Abbey, Trim Castle, rural medieval settlement, etc. Students will acquire the ability to apply archaeological findings to their own historic research. The course will include field trips to archaeological excavations, field monuments and museum collections.

Learning outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this module, students will be enabled to:

- LO 1 – Identify the key developments in Early Medieval Irish history, and possess a good understanding of the main principles of Irish Medieval Archaeology
- LO 2 – Comprehend and analyse the underlying reasons for and consequences of political, social, economic and cultural change in Medieval Ireland
- LO 3 – Engage critically with prescribed readings and a wide range of primary source matter (both print and artefact), and will be knowledgeable of the main sources for Irish archaeology
- LO 4 – Construct an objective and well-presented written argument based on a broad range of historical documents
- LO 5 – Present reasoned verbal argument in a formal setting at seminars where dissertation results are discussed.
- LO 6 – Engage in self-directed learning by specialising in areas of personal interest

HIST 307: WOMEN IN NINETEENTH-CENTURY IRELAND

DR CARLA KING

Module description:

This course will introduce students to the main developments and debates concerning the history of women in Ireland in the long nineteenth century from 1800 to 1922, focusing on four main themes:

- Perceptions of women and women's roles in the nineteenth century
- Women and the family
- Women and society (including education, social reform and work)
- Women and politics (the demands for women's rights, women's suffrage and women's involvement in nationalism and unionism)

The course will draw amply on writing by women, as well as on writings about women, both official and private, in order optimally to explore the themes identified above.

Learning outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this module, students will be enabled to:

- LO 1 – Apply transferable knowledge and understanding of the history of the period, and possess an advanced understanding of the centrality of documentary sources in the construction of history.
- LO 2 – Understand some of the important issues that shaped the history of women in the period, such as changing attitudes to women's roles, greater access to education and employment for women, and the rapidly evolving political environment.
- LO 3 – Appreciate the roles of some leading women in shaping women's organisations and perceptions.
- LO 4 – Possess a range and breadth of transferable knowledge and understanding of history and a mastery of research, analytical and writing skills.
- LO 5 – Display competence in the use of primary documents in expanding our knowledge of historical events and ideas.

Examination 1	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Preparation of a research project	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Seminar discussion and presentation of research	✓	✓	✓		✓

Objectives

By the end of this course students should have

- a good understanding of the main issues affecting women in nineteenth-century Ireland
- a capacity to critically assess documents for use in research
- an awareness of some of the main sources for Irish women's history.

There will be a set text, Maria Luddy (ed.), Women in Ireland, 1800-1918: A Documentary History (Cork University Press, 1995). Students taking the course should purchase a copy (it will be available in the College Bookshop).

HIST 310: GENDER, POWER AND POLITICS IN THE MODERN WORLD

DR LINDA KIERNAN

Students will be introduced to the concepts surrounding women's history, feminist theory and the emerging fields of studies of masculinity. It will raise questions such as:

- To what extent has gender affected political rights and participation?
- What political roles have been traditionally 'gendered'?
- Who have or what has been instrumental in addressing equal political rights to both sexes?
- How far has class played a part in political inequality?
- What part does sexuality play in the political arena, and how closely related are private morality and public ability?
- To what extent has gender determined the public image or perception of female heads of government?

Students will have the opportunity to explore a wide variety of central primary documents including the writings of Olympe de Gouges, Mary Wollstonecraft, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B Anthony, Emmeline Pankhurst, and Simone de Beauvoir.

Core texts:

Students would be advised to purchase Bridenthal, Stuard and Wiesner (eds), Becoming Visible: Women in European History. 3rd edition. Boston, 1998.

Also Peter Barry, Beginning Theory. An Introduction to Literary and Cultural Theory. Manchester, 2002. 801.95/BAR.

Primary Documents – you will be required to specialise in one of the following works, and you should purchase your own copy of the relevant text.

Possible specializations include:

Mary Wollstonecraft, Vindication of the Rights of Woman, various editions, 305.42/WOL.

Olympe de Gouges, Declaration of the Rights of Woman, available online.

Susan B Anthony, various pamphlets available online.

Emmeline Pankhurst, The suffragettes: towards emancipation, edited by Mary Mulvey Roberts and Tamae Mizuta. (London, 1993) 305.420941/ROB.

Simone de Beauvoir, The Second Sex (1948) 305.4.

Germaine Greer, The Female Eunuch (London, 1981) 305.4/GRE.

Kate Millet, Sexual Politics, 305.42/MIL.

Specialization in one of the primary texts will require the student to investigate the origins, composition, impact and continuing legacy of the work.

How did women of the time react to these works?

How do they fit into the wider context of women's history, feminist thought and political developments?

What do these texts tell us about the position of women of their time?
